

Be Spatial 2004

Pamela Kostur of the Rockley Group delivers an educational session on content management, focusing on the findings of the Rockley Group's latest book, Managing Enterprise Content: A Unified Content Strategy.

Chanaka Peiris, TCHIS application architect, Toronto Public Health, walks through the Be Spatial EXPO taking in the many products and applications on display.

Al Little, right, on behalf of the City of Hamilton, receives the Best Municipal GIS Gold Award trophy from Neil Malcolm of the Region of Peel.

Keynote speaker Nick Bontis uses a jug and a glass to demonstrate how knowledge and capabilities spill from organizations that don't anticipate their information management needs.

Jody Cameron of the City of Greater Sudbury explains the role of GIS in the city's community portal, e-sudbury.com.

Tim Hu, incoming president of URISA OC, gestures as he makes closing remarks to Be Spatial 2004.